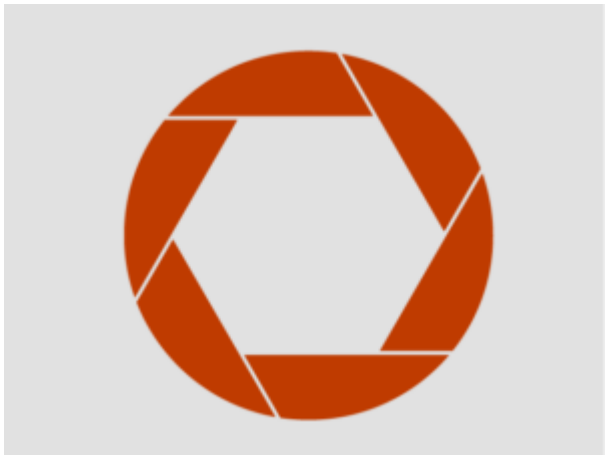
Supervision Saves Lives: Preventing Accidents Through Active Observation Picture This



The image shows a busy playground with children spread out while one educator stands stationary near a fence, focused on a conversation.

What’s wrong is not being present, but being static. Stationary supervision creates blind spots and delayed response.

What should be avoided is assuming visibility equals safety. The behaviour to model is moving with children, scanning continuously, and repositioning to maintain clear sightlines.